INVENTORY

I. Polyplaster replica of The Boy Scout, by R. Tait McKenzie. Original work completed in 1914. Original was one-quarter life size; ten copies issued. Original owned by Sir Robert Baden-Powell, the late Marshall Foch, and members of the Philadelphia Boy Scout Council, to whom the copyright was presented.

On the wooden base of this replica of the original work by McKenzie appears the following citation: “‘The Boy Scout’, Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, Presented to: Walter J. Cowan, Jr., Assistant to Director, University of Pennsylvania Athletic Department Football Scout Day Coordinator, 1968-1978, by: The Tri-State Delaware Valley Boy Scout Councils June 14, 1978”

Physical description: the statuette, cast in plaster with a green-colored glaze giving the effect of bronze, is 16.5 inches high including a circular pedestal on which appears the twelve virtues of the Boy Scout. The statuette itself, exclusive of the pedestal, is 15 inches high. The pedestal stands on a wood base, ten inches square. A plastic plate is affixed to the wood base and contains the inscription transcribed above. The statuette is damaged, the scabbard hanging free from the Boy Scout’s belt shattered by impact, revealing the internal wire frame of the plaster cast.
