UNIVERSITY of PENNSYLVANIA

Two Hundred and Twenty-First Commencement for the Conferring of Degrees

PHILADELPHIA CIVIC CENTER
CONVENTION HALL
Sunday, May 22, 1977
1:30 P.M.
Guests will find this diagram helpful in locating the approximate seating of the degree candidates. The seating corresponds to the order by school in which the candidates for degrees are presented, beginning at top left with the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and ending at bottom right with The Annenberg School. This sequence is followed in the Contents on the opposite page under Degrees in Course. Reference to the paragraph on page seven describing the colors on the candidates' hoods according to their fields of study may further assist guests in placing the locations of the various schools.

HAIL! PENNSYLVANIA!

Hail! Pennsylvania! noble and strong;
To thee with loyal hearts we raise our song.
Swelling to Heaven, loud our praises ring;
Hail! Pennsylvania! of thee we sing!

RECEPTION
The first Commencement in 1757 comprised a dual morning-afternoon session, at which were graduated distinguished men of the day like John Morgan, physician-in-chief to the American armies; Hugh Williamson and Francis Hopkinson, members of the Continental Congress; and Jacob Duché, first chaplain to the Continental Congress. Honorary degrees were conferred by the institution for the first time.

During the 1760's the practice was introduced of distributing large printed broadsides among the audience along with the regular programs. In Latin, they were dedicated in the names of the members of the graduating class to the civil authorities, the Trustees, Provost, Vice-Provost, and professors, all by name and with many expressions of respect. The main body of each paper was a series of propositions, statements, or theses, classified under various academic heads, which presumably the graduating students were willing to defend against any assertions to the contrary. The origin of these papers was to be found in the practice of medieval universities, and they reflected the constant stress laid upon the practice of disputation in the curriculum of that day.

Provost Smith made an appeal to the audience for funds for the colonial College at the Commencement in 1764, and after the exercises two of the Trustees stood at the gate to receive "the free-will offerings of pious and well-disposed persons." The collection produced 40 pounds. The next year George Whitefield spoke in the building originally erected for his use 25 years before. The Bachelor of Arts degree was conferred on William White, the future first bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States. Dr. John Morgan, who had just been appointed to the first professorship of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in America, read his medal-winning essay on "The Reciprocal Advantages Arising from a Perpetual Union between Great Britain and her American Colonies."

On May 17, 1775 the members of the second Continental Congress, which had only been in formal session for one week, adjourned their meeting in the State House and proceeded in a body to attend Commencement at the nearby College. The Trustees ordered the Commencement held on June 10, 1776 "to be a private one, on account of the unsettled State of public affairs . . ." No further Commencements were held until 1780. The July 4, 1781, ceremony was attended by the President and members of Congress, the family of the Minister of France, officers of the army, and other persons of distinction. The proceedings were suddenly halted while one of the students, Francis Murray, was in the midst of an address whose announced subject was Major André, the intermediary in the treason of Benedict Arnold during the previous year. Whether his remarks were unpatriotically favorable or unduly harsh is not known, but conferring of the student's degree was delayed until the following year.

The program for the 1863 Commencement, held while the Battle of Gettysburg was in progress, explained the absence of one of the appointed speakers, George Strawbridge, by the annotation, "Excused—gone for defense of the State." One James W. Ashton, on leave from the army for the day, gave his oration in an old scholar's gown, borrowed from the Rev. Phillips Brooks, worn over the uniform of a lieutenant in the service of the United States.
The order of the participants in the academic procession has varied during these two centuries. During one period the Provost, Trustees, and visiting dignitaries led the procession, whereas at another time members of the graduating class entered the hall first. Of unique interest is the fact that in the early 1800's the janitor of the College led the procession carrying the diplomas for the graduates. The order for today's procession is as follows: the candidates for degrees by schools; the Fifty-Year Alumni Class; the Mace-bearer; the Marshals; the Faculties and their Deans; the Officers, Associate Trustees, and Trustees; the Candidates for Honorary Degrees; the Provost and the President.

The University Mace, the symbol of authority of the University Corporation, is carried at the head of the academic procession by the Secretary of the Corporation. The Mace was a gift of the family of William M. Gordon, School of Medicine 1910. It is adorned with the arms and seal of the University, the Penn and Franklin coats of arms, a depiction of the Rittenhouse Orrery, and a thistle symbolizing the University's early ties with Scotland.

The academic dress stems from the monastic robes of the Middle Ages, when the hood was worn raised for protection in drafty halls. According to the intercollegiate system of academic costume established in 1894, Bachelors' and Masters' gowns are made of cotton poplin or similar material, while silk or rayon is used for the Doctors' gowns. The latter are trimmed with a velvet facing down the front with bars of the same across the sleeves. The mortarboard cap has been standard in the United States though soft caps are coming into use; Doctors may wear a gold tassel, but all others wear black. Some institutions have in recent years authorized Doctors' gowns in colors other than the customary black; holders of the Pennsylvania Ph.D. degree may now wear red and blue gowns.

The hood is lined with silk in the colors of the institution which granted the highest degree held by the wearer, and the color of the bordering velvet indicates the field of study to which the degree pertains. Degrees will be conferred today in: Arts, white; Science, golden yellow; Business Administration, mustard; Education, light blue; Fine Arts, brown; Philosophy, dark blue; Medicine, green; Law, purple; Dental Medicine, lilac; Veterinary Medicine, gray; Social Work, citron.

With the exception of two Bachelor of Arts degrees, the Master of Arts was the only honorary degree conferred in the early years. In 1782 the first Doctor of Laws degrees were conferred on two distinguished Frenchmen, the Chevalier de Chastellux, a Major General serving with the Continental Army, and François Barbé-Marbois, Consul General of France in this country. Upon the same occasion, honorary Doctor of Medicine and Doctor of Divinity degrees were awarded. During the latter part of the last century institutions made a practice of conferring the Doctor of Philosophy, honoris causa. This ceased at Pennsylvania after the third such degree had been granted in 1891, and since that time the Ph.D. has been granted only as an earned degree. Among the many prominent citizens in public life who have received honorary degrees from the University of Pennsylvania have been three signers of the Declaration of Independence and ten Presidents. The heads of foreign countries have been represented by Emperor Wilhelm II of Germany, King Edward VII of the United Kingdom, King Vittorio Emanuele III of Italy, King Gustaf VI Adolf of Sweden, Mohammed Reza Pahlavi Shah of Iran, President Félix Houphouet-Boigny of the Ivory Coast, President Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan of India, and President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing of France.
