THE CLASS OF 2008

continued a 135-year University of Pennsylvania tradition by unveiling its Ivy Day stone (above) at 37th and Locust Walk during a ceremony on May 17, 2008.
In the words of one elegiac tribute, “Great men have two lives: one which occurs while they work on this earth; a second which begins at the day of their death and continues as long as their ideas and conceptions remain powerful.”

These words befit the great Benjamin Franklin, whose inventions, innovations, ideas, writings, and public works continue to shape our thinking and renew the Republic he helped to create and the institutions he founded, including the University of Pennsylvania.

Nowhere does Franklin feel more contemporary, more revolutionary, and more alive than at the University of Pennsylvania. His startling vision of a secular, nonsectarian Academy that would foster an “Inclination join’d with an Ability to serve Mankind, one’s Country, Friends and Family” has never ceased to challenge Penn to redefine the scope and mission of the modern American university.

When pursued vigorously and simultaneously, the two missions — developing the inclination to do good and the ability to do well — merge to help form a more perfect university that educates more capable citizens for our democracy.

Penn has embodied and advanced Franklin’s revolutionary vision for more than 268 years. Throughout its history, Penn has extended the frontiers of higher learning and research to produce graduates and scholars whose work has enriched the nation and all of humanity.

The modern liberal arts curriculum as we know it can trace its roots to Franklin’s innovation to have Penn students study international commerce and foreign languages.

The first medical and business schools in the United States were launched here.

And the first general-purpose electronic, digital computer – ENIAC – was invented right here at the University of Pennsylvania.

At Penn, the never-ending quest for innovation and academic distinction has found perfect Franklinian expression in “The Penn Compact,” President Amy Gutmann’s bold vision for propelling our University from excellence to eminence in all our core endeavors. Fulfilling the goals of the Compact – increasing access for talented students of all backgrounds, integrating knowledge across multiple disciplines, and engaging our knowledge with communities locally and globally – is the focus of Penn’s current $3.5 billion Making History campaign, and will position the University to make the greatest possible contribution to our society and our world.

Today, Penn proudly graduates a class of men and women who have shown the intelligence, drive, integrity, and character to become engaged citizens who will serve humanity with distinction. Our Penn graduates are poised to take their place as productive democratic citizens and as just and humane stewards of our world.

In these challenging and perilous times, a world in need of young men and women who are willing to shoulder the moral responsibilities of leadership can look to Penn.

Franklin wrote: “We may make these times better if we bestir ourselves. The noblest question in the world is “What good may I do in it?”

The answer to this question will be furnished by Franklin’s newest heirs, the graduates of 2008.

COMMENCEMENT SEATING

Guests will find this diagram helpful in locating the approximate seating of the degree candidates. The sequence in which the candidates are presented for degrees is shown on the next page. The list on page 13, detailing the colors of the candidates' hoods according to their fields of study, may further assist guests in identifying the locations of the various schools.

In case of emergency, evacuation procedures will be announced.

Oh, say, can you see, by the dawn’s early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight’s last gleaming?
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, thro’ the perilous fight
O’er the ramparts we watched, were so gallantly streaming.
And the rockets red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there.
Oh, say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O’er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

THE RED AND BLUE
By William J. Goeckel, Class of 1896, and Harry E. Westervelt, Class of 1898

Come all ye loyal classmates now, in hall and campus through,
Lift up your hearts and voices for the royal Red and Blue.
Fair Harvard has her crimson, old Yale her colors too,
But for dear Pennsylvania, we wear the Red and Blue.

(Chorus)
Hurrah! Hurrah! Pennsylvania!
Hurrah for the Red and the Blue;
Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!
Hurrah for the Red and the Blue.

RECESSIONAL
HISTORICAL NOTES

TWO HUNDRED FIFTY YEARS AGO:

Penn in 1758

In the space of about 4 years, from the first opening, it was found that many youths, having gone through their course of Grammar-Learning, would be desirous of proceeding to Philosophy and the Sciences, and must depart to other Seminaries unless provision was made for completing their studies here. . . .

In consideration of this, the Trustees determined to complete the remainder of their plan, and applied for an Addition to their charter, by which a power of conferring degrees and appointing Professors in the various branches of the arts and sciences, was granted to them. By this means, a COLLEGE was added to and ingrafted upon the former Academy [and] a joint government agreed upon for both. . . . This charter was obtained May 14th 1755. What further relates to the government of this institution shall be mentioned, after giving a view of the plans of education pursued in it, which I am to do under two heads. The first shall be the plan of education in the college or higher part of the institution, including the Latin and Greek schools, which shows the course gone through by those intended for the learned professions. The second shall be what is properly called the Academy, showing the course of learning intended for those who are bred for the mechanic arts and other professions.

A VIEW of the LATIN and GREEK SCHOOLS

1st STAGE. Grammar. Vocabulary. Sententiae Pueriles. Cordery. Aesop. Erasmus. N.B. To be exact in declining and conjugating. To begin to write Exercises for the better understanding of Syntax. Writing and Reading of English to be continued if necessary.

4th STAGE. Horace. Terence. Virgil reviewed. Livy. Lucian. Xenophon or Homer begun. N.B. This Year to make Themes; write Letters; give Descriptions and Characters. To turn Latin into English, with great regard to Punctuation and Choice of Words. Some English and Latin Orations to be delivered, with proper Grace both of Elocution and Gesture. Arithmetic begun.

Probably some youths will go through these stages in three years, many will require four years, and many more may require five years, especially if they begin under nine or ten years of age. The masters must exercise their best discretion in this respect.

Those who can acquit themselves to satisfaction in the books laid down for the fourth stage, after public examination, are to proceed to the study of the sciences, and to be admitted into the College as Freshmen, with the privilege of being distinguished with an under graduate's gown. The method of study to be prosecuted in the college for the term of three years, follows in one general view.
the rudiments of education here to fit them for various sorts of business and mechanic arts, is unspeakable. For though the number of Boys was only intended to be 60, yet it is generally near 80, and would be much greater if they could be received.

Thus, besides 5 Professors that constitute the Faculty, and have the immediate inspection of the whole, 6 other persons are continually employed in this institution, making 11 in all, by whom 266 students and scholars, often more, are instructed, and all the branches of education carried on that are necessary, either for the learned professions, or merchandise, or the mechanic arts and inferior callings. A seminary, on so extensive a plan, is no where else to be found in this new world, nor in many parts of the old; ...

William Smith was Provost of the colonial College for 25 years, the longest tenure of any Provost in Penn’s history. His plan of preparatory school and college curricula remained fully in place until the 1850s, when the Trustees closed the Academy and altered the collegiate curriculum to provide for the degree of Bachelor of Science. It remained partly in place until the second decade of the 20th century, when the College faculty finally agreed to drop Greek as one of the required courses for the Bachelor of Arts degree. Smith’s influence on the College at Penn was therefore felt for more than 150 years, a record unmatched in University history. His 1758 “Account” – now published online – should be read in its entirety by those with a contemplative interest in Penn and in the history of higher education in America.

ONE HUNDRED FIFTY YEARS AGO:

Penn in 1858

An idealized view of the mid 19th century campus, which was located on the west side of 9th Street, between Chestnut and Market Streets. The School of Medicine building stands on the left and the College on the right. In addition to the undergraduates, the College building also accommodated the Law School and the School of Engineering. Water color on paper by W.G. Caldecaugh, December 1830.

Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

In 1858, a little more than a century after its founding, the College continued at the center of University life, but Penn was rapidly becoming an institution for educating the professions. The Trustees had established a School of Medicine in 1765 – the first school of medicine in the American colonies – and it became, in the early 19th century, the national leader in American medical education. In the academic year 1857–1858 there were 111 students enrolled in the College and 435 in the School of Medicine. While the great majority of the students in the College were from Philadelphia, the students in the School of Medicine represented 27 U.S. states and eight foreign countries. In the same year, there were 60 students enrolled in Penn’s two new professional schools: 53 in the Law School (founded in 1850) and seven in the predecessor to the School of Engineering and Applied Science (founded in 1852). In subsequent decades, the Trustees established the School of Dental Medicine (1878), the Wharton School (1881), the School of Veterinary Medicine (1884), the Graduate School of Education (1914), the School of Design (1920), the School of Social Policy & Practice (1948), and the School of Nursing (1950), all of which trained candidates for the professions. Penn’s professional schools, led by the School of Medicine, very much overshadowed the College throughout the 19th century and the first half of the 20th. Perhaps the most telling indication of this era in Penn’s history is to note that the Bachelor of Arts degree was Penn’s most popular degree only until 1797, when it was surpassed by the M.D. The Bachelor of Arts degree did not re-emerge as Penn’s most popular until 1959. In that year it overtook the Wharton School’s undergraduate degree, the Bachelor of Science in Economics, which had been the leading degree since 1920. In one of the major changes of the late 20th century at Penn, the College, since 1959, has been restored to the center of University life.

150 YEARS AGO: Henry Vethake (1790-1866), eighth Provost of the University of Pennsylvania. Vethake was Professor of Mathematics at Penn from 1836 to 1854 and the University’s Provost from 1854 to 1859. He was also the second Provost in Penn’s history to that point who was not an ordained clergyman. An undated photograph by an unknown photographer.

End of an Era

They had come to bury Woodland Avenue, not to praise it. Dignified, hammer-wielding gentlemen banged away happily at the nails in a spanking-new barricade. ... There was much nostalgia, but few kind words for the old avenue. ... Thus came to pass the official demise of Woodland Avenue between 34th and 37th Streets as a thoroughfare for vehicular traffic. The date: Founder's Day, January 11, 1958. The time: 12:15 p.m. For 86 years, ever since the University moved to West Philadelphia, this section of Woodland Avenue has bisected the campus — has prevented the University, in fact, from having one. Now 'tis gone — or will be shortly.

The Pennsylvania Gazette for February 1958

Expansion Unlimited

Alumni who went home from Alumni Day rubbing their eyes in disbelief over the recent physical changes on the Pennsylvania campus will think Aladdin himself has come to West Philadelphia when they return twenty years hence. Even a cursory glance at the $78 million expansion program planned for the years 1960 to 1975 will reveal some kind of genie at work. But there's nothing the least bit supernatural about him. Planning, hard work, the cooperation of governmental authorities and — above all — an unbounded faith in Pennsylvania's destiny, are the sources of his strength.

The recent decision of the University to ask the Philadelphia Redevelopment Authority to take title to two more West Philadelphia blocks brought with it an announcement of tremendous importance by the Authority's chairman, Michael von Moschzisker, '47 L. The University's plans, he said, tie in with the City's long range proposal for a new "University City," stretching from 32nd Street to 40th and from Baltimore Avenue on the south to Mantua Avenue on the north. Drexel Institute of Technology and other educational, civic and church groups will help develop a great new cultural community in the University area.

The Pennsylvania Gazette for June 1958

The closing of Woodland Avenue — made possible by placing the surface trolley-car lines underground — was a brilliant example of urban re-design. It created a great campus square, bounded by 34th, Spruce, 36th, and Walnut Streets, the first in Penn's history. College Green became the model for subsequent development, beginning with Hill Square (created in 1959), continuing with the Annenberg School (1960), the Social Sciences quadrangle (1962), and Sansom Place (1966), and culminating in Super Block (1968). By 1970, Penn's share of "University City" did indeed extend from 32nd Street on the east to 40th Street on the west to Baltimore Avenue on the south and to Chestnut Street on the north. It was an era of expansion unmatched in Penn's history.

The rapid growth of Penn's campus and the construction of dozens of new buildings were only two aspects of the University's advancement in the 1950s and 1960s. Gaylord P. Harnwell, President of the University from 1953 through 1970, was extraordinarily successful as Penn's first modern president. A distinguished physicist, Harnwell came to Penn in 1938 from the faculty of Princeton University. He performed government service in World War II which earned him military honors and national recognition. As a faculty leader, he championed the construction of a new Physical Sciences building (now the David Rittenhouse Laboratory) and as President, he dedicated the completed facility in 1954. He also won major funding from the Ford Foundation to conduct a comprehensive self-study of the University, which came to be known as the Educational Survey. The Educational Survey laid the academic foundation for the decade that followed. In 1959 Harnwell established the University's Office of Planning and through it he built Penn's case for academic and physical plant expansion. An early result was the Integrated Development Plan of 1962, one of the milestones of 20th century planning at Penn. Finally, he capitalized on the national economic expansion of the 1960s, mounting a successful, five-year, capital campaign, the Development Program of 1964 – 1969. Fifty years ago, Penn was fortunate to have the first of a succession of great presidents.

50 YEARS AGO: University ceremony to mark the beginning of demolition for Hill House Square, 5 February 1958. Less than a month after the closing of Woodland Avenue, Penn embarked on its first major urban renewal project. Under the direction of the City of Philadelphia and its Redevelopment Authority and with funding from the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, the University acquired the two city blocks bounded by Chestnut Street on the north, 32nd Street on the east, Walnut Street on the south, and 34th Street on the west. Hill House, the first building on this land, was completed and occupied in November 1960. Photograph by Lillian Burns, 1958.

Discovering New Territory

Nowhere are signs of our progress more visible than in the changes to our campus. We are already beginning to implement the first phase of our Penn Connects campus development plan by building and renovating facilities that will inspire the creation of knowledge and encourage the exchange of ideas. You may have noticed the new green roof on English House, external and internal improvements to Civic House, and upgrades in Harnwell College House. Construction of our new Annenberg Public Policy Center is underway. In 2008 expect to see the opening of our Perelman Center for Advanced Medicine, and the completion of renovations to Harnwell and Penn Nursing’s Fagin Hall. We also will begin renovations to Rodin College House, the Music Building, and facilities at Franklin Field.

Penn Connects calls for the creation of a strong commercial, residential, and recreational neighborhood along the Schuylkill River that will strengthen connections between University City and Center City. Later this year, we will begin converting parking lots along the river into our new 24-acre Penn Park, whose athletic fields, recreational green spaces, and river views will transform the landscape. In November, Penn’s development partner Brandywine Realty Trust began demolition of the Post Office Truck Terminal Annex on 30th Street between Chestnut and Walnut streets. Brandywine will redevelop the site as Cira Centre South, a new office and retail complex that will spark economic growth and will house some of Penn’s administrative services, thereby allowing us to continue strengthening our academic core.

Along the western edge of the park lands we are building what may be the first truly translational biomedical research facility in the country. Designed to foster interactivity, this complex will integrate the Perelman Center for Advanced Medicine’s state-of-the-art outpatient cancer and cardiac care with the Roberts Proton Therapy Center (opening in 2009) and a clinical research tower (opening in 2010). While our building and renovation plans to enhance academic and residential life at Penn span the next 30 years, the changes now taking shape give us much to anticipate in coming months.

Our momentum in all of these areas is matched by the progress of our Making History campaign. More than 7,500 alumni parents, faculty, staff, students and friends joined together in October for twin launch celebrations on campus. We have raised $1.72 billion toward our $3.5 billion goal. Enthusiastic participants have turned out for regional events in Boston and Washington, DC, and this month we will carry our message to Asia before returning home for trips to the West Coast, South, and mid-West. … I look forward to discovering new territory with you in 2008 as we continue on our journey toward even greater eminence.

President Amy Gutmann
“Discovering New Territory”
Almanac for 15 January 2008

President Gutmann formally announced Penn Connects: A Vision for the Future in January 2007 and she followed in October with the opening of the public phase of Making History, the five-year capital campaign which will support, in part, the Penn Connects campus plan. She and the Trustees are advancing on excellent precedent. Penn’s historic campus expansion of the 1950s and 1960s was rooted in the Educational Survey of 1954 – 1959, conceptualized in the Integrated Development Plan of 1962 and funded, in part, by the $93 million Development Program of 1964 – 1969. The Educational Survey established Penn’s academic priorities. The Integrated Development Plan established land use and physical plant expansion priorities. The Development Program, which went over the top at more than $100 million, underwrote much of what was projected in the campus plan. Not until 1969, when the national economy stalled, did the fifteen-year boom at Penn come to a close. At the present time, the Penn Compact, Penn Connects, and Making History together promise a similar, long-term expansion of historic proportions.

A new eastern extension of campus is at the heart of Penn Connects. Like the University’s expansion in the 1950s and 1960s, the planning, acquisition of real estate, and re-development of Penn’s eastern extension are the work of more than a decade of steady progress. It began in earnest in 1996, with the purchase of a six-acre city block, bounded by Chestnut Street on the north, 31st Street on the east, Walnut Street on the south, and 32nd Street on the west. Here the University re-developed the award-winning “Left Bank” building, converting it into a mixed-use facility of office, retail, and residential spaces. It gathered momentum with the Trustees’ adoption of the “Campus Development Plan 2001,” which called for the construction of a “gateway to the east.” The University took a hugely important step in this direction in 2003 and 2004, when it re-developed the building and property at 3025 Walnut Street (on the northeast corner of 31st and Walnut Streets) to house the University-owned radio station, WXPN, and the celebrated World Café Live. President Gutmann presided at the opening of this facility, which took place in October 2004. Pushing farther east, the University next bought more than an acre of ground at 126 South 30th Street and re-developed it as the “Translational Research Laboratory,” serving Penn’s School of Medicine. The President and Trustees opened the Translational Research Laboratory in November 2005. By this time, Penn was deeply committed to realizing its dream of a new eastern extension of campus, a gateway to Philadelphia’s center city.

Penn’s planners and senior management saw that the keystone to the eastern extension was the property of the U.S. Postal Service. It extended from 30th and Market Streets on the north to Penn’s athletic fields on the south and from 31st Street on the west to the rails of Amtrak’s Boston-Washington corridor on the east. In an urban setting, it represented a once-in-a-century opportunity. In June 2003, shortly after the property became available, Penn’s Trustees authorized a purchase agreement for the entire tract of land. Four years intervened (while the USPS constructed a new mail processing facility in southwest Philadelphia), but finally, in July 2007, Penn acquired nearly 16 acres of space in which to expand. It is a dream come true. Penn immediately leased the northernmost parcel to Brandywine Realty Trust, which will develop the site as Cira Centre South, with mixed-use office towers, a parking garage, and street-level retail. Brandywine has already cleared the site of its USPS buildings and construction will begin soon. Penn will incorporate the remainder of this massive acquisition, along with existing athletic fields, into “Penn Park,” a twenty-four acre tract of land stretching from Walnut Street on the north to the South Street bridge. Phase One of Penn Park will feature accommodations for both recreational sports activities and formal athletic facilities. The University has selected a distinguished landscape architect for Penn Park and design is underway.

South of South Street the most impressive aspects of Penn Connects are the major new buildings of the University’s Health System. They are being constructed on a 19 acre tract on the southeast side of the 3400 block of Civic Center Boulevard. The Philadelphia Commercial Museum, the Municipal Auditorium (also known as Convention Hall), and the Philadelphia Civic Center formerly occupied this site. When the new Pennsylvania Convention Center opened in center city Philadelphia in June 1993, these buildings became obsolete. Penn has since worked in partnership with the Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia to acquire and develop this property. The two institutions jointly purchased two acres in 1999 and in 2002 completed construction of a much needed parking garage at 3499 Civic Center Boulevard. Additional purchases of eight acres, three and a half acres, and five and a half acres were made in 2001, 2005, and 2006, respectively. In 2006 Children’s Hospital announced the construction of a new advanced research facility on its eight acres. In 2008 the University is in the midst of construction on three projects: the Perelman Center for Advanced Medicine, the Roberts Proton Therapy Center, and a new medical research center located adjacent to the other two. The Perelman Center is scheduled for opening in late 2008. The openings of the other two buildings will follow closely behind. These facilities will transform the practice of medicine at Penn and they will help fulfill the promise of Penn Connects.

The Penn Compact, Penn Connects, and Making History are Penn’s signature programs for the 21st century. They are as worthy of celebration today as Provost Smith’s “Account” of the College of Philadelphia 250 years ago.

ACADEMIC CEREMONY AND REGALIA

Today — May 19, 2008 — is the University of Pennsylvania’s 252nd Commencement. Penn traces its origins to a deed of trust executed in 1740 and is celebrating its 268th birthday this year. President Amy Gutmann will confer bachelors, masters, and doctoral degrees upon some 6,000 graduates of the University’s 12 schools. Honorary degrees will be awarded to seven individuals of distinction in varied fields, as you will note on pages 16 and 17 in this program.

The practice of sporting signs on caps and gowns as a form of public proclamation at Commencement dates to the early 1760s and recalls an even more ancient tradition, originating in the practice of medieval universities. Penn’s archives contain several 18th century broadsides, printed in Latin, which were distributed to Commencement guests along with the regular programs. The broadsides contain a series of propositions classified under various academic headings. Presumably, the graduating students were willing to defend these theses against any assertions to the contrary. On the eve of the Revolution, however, statements such as “the rights of the people are as divine as the rights of their rulers” must have met with widespread sympathy.

Academic Ceremony and Regalia

Commencement exercises at American universities and colleges traditionally are composed of three essential elements: the Academic Procession, the conferring of degrees, and the Commencement address. This practice has been codified since 1895, when a national conference on academic costume and ceremony was proposed and a plan known initially as the “Intercollegiate System” was formally adopted. The Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania incorporated this code in the Statutes of the University in November 1896. Now under the aegis of the American Council on Education, the “Academic Costume Code and Academic Ceremony Guide” was revised in 1932 and 1960.* Throughout the 20th century, Commencement at Penn has, with minor modifications, followed the dictates of the code and its revisions.

By 1896, however, Penn had been granting degrees for nearly 140 years. Like other American colonial colleges, Penn borrowed its 18th century Commencement rituals directly from the English universities. By 1896, however, Penn had been granting degrees for nearly 140 years. Like other American colonial colleges, Penn borrowed its 18th century Commencement rituals directly from the English universities. In England, the history of academic dress reaches back to the early days of the oldest schools. As early as the second half of the 14th century, the statutes of certain colleges prohibited “excess in apparel” and required the wearing of a long gown. It is still an open question as to whether academic dress finds its sources chiefly in ecclesiastical or in civilian dress. It is often suggested that gowns and hoods were the simplest, most effective method of staying warm in the unheated, stone buildings which housed medieval scholars. In any case, academic regalia had evolved to contemporary familiarity by the time Benjamin Franklin was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws by the University of St. Andrews in 1759.

Traditions and Current Practice at Penn

In April 1887, on the recommendation of a committee of the faculty, the Trustees adopted the “Pennsylvania System of Academic Costume.” The colors and trimmings of hoods and caps were regularized according to faculty and degree. Beginning with the Commencement of 1887, the “Pennsylvania System” was published in each year’s program and adherence to its rules was expected of trustees, faculty, and students alike. Beginning in 1896, the “Pennsylvania System” was superseded by the “Intercollegiate System,” which has continued in effect to the present time.

The gowns used in American academic ceremonies vary according to the highest degree awarded to the wearer. The gown for the bachelor’s degree has pointed sleeves; it is designed to be worn closed. The gown for the masters degree has an oblong sleeve, open at the wrist. The sleeve base hangs down in the traditional manner. The rear part of its oblong shape is square cut and the front has an arc cut away. The masters gown may be worn open or closed. The doctoral gown is a more elaborate costume faced down the front with black velvet and across the sleeves with three bars of the same; these facings and cross-bars may be of velvet of the color distinctive to the field of study to which the degree pertains. The doctoral gown has bell-shaped sleeves and may be worn open or closed. Some institutions have authorized doctoral gowns in colors other than the customary black; holders of the University of Pennsylvania doctorate may wear red and blue gowns.

The hoods are lined in silk with the official color or colors of the college or university which granted the highest degree held by the wearer; more than one color is shown by division of the field color in a variety of ways, such as by chevron or chevrons. The binding or edging of the hood is in velvet, with widths of two inches, three inches, and five inches for the bachelors, masters, and doctoral degrees, respectively. The color of the border indicates the field of study to which the degree pertains. University of Pennsylvania graduates wear a hood lined in red with a blue chevron. The mortarboard cap is standard, though soft square-topped caps are permissible. Recipients of doctorates may wear a gold tassel fastened to the middle point of the top of the cap; all others wear black.

Degrees shall be conferred today according to the following order:

- Arts & Letters, white
- Science, golden yellow
- Business Administration, mustard
- Nursing, apricot
- Medicine, green
- Law, purple
- Fine Arts, brown
- Dental Medicine, lilac
- Veterinary Medicine, gray
- Education, light blue
- Social Work, citron
- Philosophy, dark blue

The order for today's Academic Ceremony is as follows:

- Mace Bearer
- President and Provost
- Chairman of the Board of Trustees
- Commencement Speaker
- Candidates for Honorary Degrees
- Deans
- Trustees
- Officers of the University
- Overseers
- Visiting Dignitaries

The Mace

The Secretary of the University carries the University mace, the symbol of authority of the University, at the head of the Academic Procession. It was a gift of the family of William Murray Gordon, M.D. 1910. It is adorned with the seal and arms of the University, the Penn and Franklin coats-of-arms, a depiction of the Rittenhouse orrery, and a thistle symbolizing the early ties of the University with Scotland.

The President’s Badge of Office

The President wears as a badge of office a silver medallion of which one face is engraved, like the mace, with the University seal. The obverse of the President's medal bears the “orrery seal,” designed in 1782 by Francis Hopkinson, A.B. 1757, a Signer of the Declaration of Independence. The medal, suspended on a chain composed of silver links, was given by the late Trustee Thomas Sovereign Gates, Jr., A.B. 1928, LL.D. 1956, on the occasion of Sheldon Hackney's inauguration as President in October 1981.

University Seal and Symbols

The Seal of the Corporation

The Trustees of the University have an official seal that is, in effect, the signature of the corporation. It had its origin at a meeting of the Board of Trustees in 1755 with Benjamin Franklin as Chairman. Though the seal underwent changes over the years, the most recent design, approved in 1932 and adopted in 1933, returned it to virtually its original form.

The seal is composed of seven books stacked on a slanted desk top with the books bearing the following titles, representing the curricula of the day: Theolog, Astronom, Philosoph, Mathemat, Logica, Rhetorica, Grammatica. On the periphery of the stack of books appears the University motto, Leges Sine Moribus Vanae, and the whole is circled with the inscription Universitatis Pennsylvanicae.

Penn Coat-of-Arms

The Penn coat-of-arms was derived by combining the coat-of-arms of Benjamin Franklin and that of William Penn's family. The dolphin on the red chief was part of Franklin's coat-of-arms and the three silver plates on a blue chevron were a part of Penn's. The two were combined on a white shield along with two open volumes representing Pennsylvania's educational purpose.

Motto: Leges Sine Moribus Vanae

The motto of the University, Leges Sine Moribus Vanae, means "Laws without morals are useless." It comes from the longer quotation from Horace, "Quid leges sine moribus vanae proficiunt?" the sense of which is "of what avail are empty laws without (good) morals?"

School Colors

Eighteenth century American academic institutions did not have colors. The earliest known representation of the combined Penn colors, red and blue, is on the incised lid of the 1871 College Hall cornerstone.

One legend traces their origins to an early track meet at Saratoga, New York, between Penn, Harvard, and Yale. When asked by the officials what colors would be representing the Penn team, the Pennsylvania captain reportedly replied, "We're going to be wearing the colors of the teams we beat," i.e. Harvard Crimson and Yale Blue. We shall assume that Penn was victorious and thus remained loyal to the Red and Blue.
The School of Arts and Sciences (1755)
The School of Arts and Sciences (SAS) is the direct descendant of the College of Philadelphia, where Benjamin Franklin established the first modern arts and sciences curriculum in the English colonies. Undergraduate programs for men date to the chartering of the College in 1755; the College of Liberal Arts for Women was founded in 1933. The Graduate School was established in 1882 with the appointment of a Faculty of Philosophy. The College of General Studies (lifelong learning) traces its roots to 1892. The School of Arts and Sciences was born in 1974 with the merger of the College of Arts and Sciences, the College for Women, the Graduate School, and four social science departments from Wharton. Today SAS is the largest of the University's 12 schools, providing a liberal arts education for all Penn undergraduates and supporting graduate studies, basic research, and continuing education across the full range of the humanities, natural sciences, and social sciences. The School has 26 departments with 493 standing faculty, 25 research centers, five interschool institutes, and 10,000 students.

The School of Medicine (1765)
The first medical school in the English colonies was established at Penn in 1765, and it has set the academic tone and direction of American medical education since that time. Today, the School of Medicine, a leader among the nation's medical schools, is committed to the highest standards in education, research, and patient care. It is continuously engaged in long-range strategic planning and implementation, focusing on programs and facilities that will take it well into the 21st century. In the current academic year, the School has 28 departments, 22 interdepartmental centers and institutes, and 1,701 full-time faculty members. It educates 571 M.D. students, 148 M.D./Ph.D. students, and 546 Ph.D. students, and trains more than a thousand residents and fellows. The School ranks third in the nation in research monies granted by the National Institutes of Health.

The Law School (1790)
Legal education at Penn began in 1790 with a series of lectures on law by its first law professor, James Wilson, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and one of the original six justices of the Supreme Court of the United States. After a long hiatus, instruction in law was re instituted in 1850 by George Sharswood; in 1852 the Bachelor of Laws degree was conferred for the first time, and in 1888 the course of study was extended from two to three years. Today Penn Law's pervasive cross-disciplinary program sets the standard in legal education with an unparalleled program that starts at the Law School and extends throughout the University. More than 75 percent of our faculty hold advanced degrees beyond law and more than one-third have joint appointments and affiliations, adding a broader perspective to the classroom. Our students augment their legal education with classes throughout the University, and earn certificates and joint degrees from many of the graduate and professional programs. In the 2007-2008 academic year the Law School has 878 students; 57 standing faculty including 10 associated faculty and clinicians, one senior fellow, and one senior lecturer; and 93 practitioners/lecturers. The School awards four degrees: Juris Doctor; Master of Laws; Master of Comparative Laws; and Doctor of the Science of Law.

The School of Engineering and Applied Science (1852)
The School of Engineering and Applied Science (SEAS) is one of the oldest in the United States, tracing its beginnings to the establishment of the School of Mines, Arts and Manufactures in 1852. The first graduate of the School received a Bachelor of Science degree in 1854. Since that time, the School has grown into a center of excellence in the creation of technology and in technology education. Its spirit of innovation led to the creation in 1946 of ENIAC, the first all-electronic, large-scale, general-purpose digital computer, making SEAS the birthplace of the computer age. Today, Penn Engineering offers a wide range of undergraduate and graduate programs, including the first alternative liberal arts program based in an engineering school. SEAS is particularly distinguished by its interdisciplinary, cross-school programs such as Management and Technology, Digital Media Design, Biotechnology, and the Executive Masters in Technology Management. Penn Engineering currently has 105 standing faculty, approximately 1,500 undergraduate students, 1,000 graduate students, four research institutes, seven research centers, and one regional institute.

The School of Design (1869)

Although the School of Design dates its founding from 1890, architecture courses were first offered at the University of Pennsylvania in 1869, making Penn's architecture program the second oldest in the United States. In 1921, the Department of Architecture joined with the Department of Music and Fine Arts to create an independent undergraduate School of Fine Arts modeled on the French École des Beaux Arts. In 1958, the School was renamed the Graduate School of Fine Arts, reflecting the shift to graduate degree offerings in architecture, city and regional planning, landscape architecture and fine arts. The triumvirate of architecture, landscape architecture and city planning shaped the core of the School in the 1950s and 1960s. In the 1980s, a program in historic preservation was added. Today, the School provides a rich environment for the study of the arts, architecture, landscapes and urbanism. Its opportunities now include undergraduate study in fine arts, architecture and digital media design. As a more accurate description of the School's major concerns and advancements made across a variety of fields, the School was renamed, in 2003, the School of Design. The School has a standing faculty of 30, approximately 130 lecturers and associated faculty, and more than 500 students.

The School of Dental Medicine (1878)
The Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania established a faculty of dentistry in March 1878 making Penn Dental the third oldest university-affiliated dental school in the nation. The School's first decades were remarkable for the diversity of its students, for even in the 1880s, nearly every state in the Union and many foreign countries were well represented. The School was endowed by Thomas W. Evans, a native Philadelphian and an extraordinary dentist, whose legacy made possible the construction of the School's Evans Institute in 1915, which remains the site of much of the School's clinical and classroom instruction. Penn Dental's educational, research and patient care facilities reached a new level of excellence with the construction of the state-of-the-art Robert Schattner Center. As a major provider of dental care to the West Philadelphia neighborhood, the School has also established innovative community outreach programs servicing the area. In the 2007-2008 academic year there were 375 faculty, including 50 standing faculty and 516 students.

The Wharton School (1881)

The Graduate School of Education (1914)
The Graduate School of Education (GSE) is nationally distinguished as a leader in the production of education research and in the preparation of education practitioners. GSE is unique among schools of education in its emphasis on the interactive relationships of education theory, research, and practice. The School is organized into four divisions, has 41 standing faculty, various research centers, and approximately 1,000 students. Originally an undergraduate education school and, for many years, a five-year professional school, GSE now provides advanced professional qualifications for educators across the lifespan and offers courses that lead to practice- and research-focused masters and doctoral degrees. The School also offers executive doctoral degree programs and a broad schedule of continuing education courses.

The School of Social Policy & Practice (1948)
The School of Social Policy & Practice began in 1908 as a private school that opened its doors to five students in the field of child welfare. The School affiliated itself with the University in 1935 and became a formal school in 1948. In 2005, it changed its name from the School of Social Work to the School of Social Policy & Practice. The School offers the Master of Social Work, Master of Science in Nonprofit/Non-Governmental Leadership, Master of Science in Social Policy, and Doctor of Philosophy in Social Welfare degrees. This year, the School launched the clinical Doctor of Social Work degree program, and will graduate the first cohort in 2010. The School is devoted to advancing human welfare, promoting social justice, and developing effective societal responses to global human need. Building on the School's near-century-long commitment to social work and social change, the School educates clinicians, policymakers, scholars, researchers, and leaders who work to advance the human welfare of local, national, and global communities. The School houses a number of research centers and programs, including: the Field Center for Children's Policy, Practice, and Research; the Center for Research on Youth and Social Policy; the Cartographic Modeling Lab; the Social Work Mental Health Research Center; the Social Impact of the Arts Project; the Program for Religion and Social Policy Research; and the Ortner-Unity Center on Family Violence. The School has 19 standing faculty and 370 students.

The Annenberg School for Communication (1959)
Founded in 1958 through the generosity and vision of diplomat and philanthropist Walter Annenberg, the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania is devoted to furthering our understanding of the role of communication in public life through research, education and service. At the School's founding, Ambassador Annenberg identified its unique mission. "Every human advancement or reversal can be understood through communication," he said. "The right to free communication carries with it responsibility to respect the dignity of others — and this must be recognized as irreversible. Educating students to effectively communicate this message and to be of service to all people is the enduring mission of this school." Nationally ranked as the best graduate program in mass communication, health communication, political communication, and culture, society and communication, the Annenberg School has 17 standing faculty, 5 secondary faculty, over 80 graduate students and more than 200 undergraduate students. The school offers the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, and runs an undergraduate program through the College of Arts and Sciences. The School is home to the Annenberg Public Policy Center, the Center of Excellence in Cancer Communication Research, the Center for Global Communication Studies, the Scholars Program in Culture & Communication, and the Institute for Public Service, among many additional projects pursuing innovative communication research and services.
Michael R. Bloomberg
You have much in common with our founder, Benjamin Franklin. A brilliant businessman, generous philanthropist, and selfless champion for the public good, you have improved lives while keeping a watchful eye for posterity. Raised in a family of modest means, from an early age you embraced Franklin's notion that every American deserves opportunity. You worked your way through college, earning a B.S. in electrical engineering from Johns Hopkins and an MBA from Harvard. Like Franklin, you rose to prominence in business: he as a printer, you as investment banker at Salomon Brothers. In 1981 you hit on your first great invention: a technologically efficient financial news service. Today, Bloomberg LP boasts more than 250,000 subscribers and 9,500 employees in more than 130 cities worldwide.

Having accumulated wealth, you embarked on your second enterprise: philanthropy. Your support transformed Johns Hopkins' Bloomberg School of Public Health into one of the world's leading institutions of public health research and training. Soon after the devastation of September 11, 2001, you defined all odds by seeking and winning the "second toughest job in the country," the mayorality of New York City. There you not only reinvented government; you also redefined our understanding of what government can accomplish. You literally took down the walls that separated mayors from their staffs, replacing separate offices with an open "bullpen." You have engineered improvements in housing, employment, and education for the people of New York. Your lifelong devotion to public health has driven you to propose congestion pricing, to lower carbon emissions by retrofitting New York's cab fleet, and to take the subway to work. For a token annual salary of $1, you are giving the City of New York your two most valuable resources: your time and expertise.

For making America's largest city cleaner and safer, for fearlessly proving that good policy is good politics, and for your visionary contributions to society that cannot be measured in election cycles, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Michael R. Bloomberg, the degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa.

Paquito D'Rivera
Towering master of Latin jazz and world music, you have transcended genres and cultures for more than a half century. As a composer, bandleader, and musical magician, you lift the human spirit with music that celebrates freedom and bewitches the soul. A child prodigy who began performing on the saxophone and clarinet in your native Cuba at age 6, you learned from your musician father that Mozart and Monk both sprang from one great source. You affirmed this credo in 1973 when you joined pianist Chucho Valdés and trumpeter Arturo Sandoval to found and co-direct Irakere, the path-breaking Cuban band that fearlessly and joyously mixed disco and funk grooves with salsa, Afro-Cuban, classical, and jazz, often at blinding speed. Hailed in America and Europe, you won the first of your nine Grammy awards in 1979.

Leaving home and family to escape Fidel Castro's regime in 1981, you settled in New York and teamed up with greats like Dizzy Gillespie. You earned your first solo Grammy in 1996 for Portraits of Cuba; in 2003 you became the first artist to win both jazz and classical Latin Grammies.

You branched out into composing, writing chamber music and concerti. In 2004 your Merengue, performed by cellist Yo-Yo Ma, earned you a Grammy for Best Instrumental Composition.

In your earthy memoir, appropriately titled My Sax Life, you write "Cubans can switch directly and without notice from a flood of tears to dissolute and licentious laughter." Having experienced the anguish of exile, the joy of reuniting with your family, and heights of achievement marked by multiple honors including the 2007 Living Jazz Legend Award, you speak from experience.

You based your 2005 wind quintet, Kites over Havana, on a poem that reads, "When once you have tested flight, you will forever walk the Earth with your eyes turned skyward..."

For pushing the boundaries of artistic possibility with graceful virtuosity, and for your magnificent musical kite that has raised all the world's eyes skyward, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Paquito D'Rivera, the degree of Doctor of Music, honoris causa.

Drew Gilpin Faust
One of the foremost historians of the antebellum South and a daughter of the University of Pennsylvania, you have reshaped our understanding of Southern intellectual and social history. Eminent scholar, unconventional feminist, and unifying leader, you have won universal esteem among your peers in higher education.

Raised in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley, you wrote a letter at age 7 to President Eisenhower protesting school segregation. You disobeyed your native culture's directive to be "ladylike" by joining the quintessential young boys' network: the 4-H club. Raising cattle and sheep with the boys, you showed "Drew Grit."

After earning a B.A. in history from Bryn Mawr, you completed your M.A. and PhD in American Civilization at Penn before joining our then male-dominated history faculty in 1975. When you left Penn 25 years later, nearly half of our history faculty members were women, while the Penn Women's Studies program you directed was widely respected throughout the academy.

Your scholarship has illuminated the Civil War's enduring impact on American life. Your prizewinning book, Mothers of Invention: Women of the Slaveholding South in the American Civil War, probes the war's effects on privileged Confederate women. This Republic of Suffering: Death and the American Civil War, published this year to critical acclaim, describes the rituals Americans created to cope with unprecedented war-induced suffering and loss.

Appointed Founding Dean of the Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study in 2001, you transformed the renowned women's college into one of the world's most formidable sciences and humanities research institutes. In 2007 you smashed a 370-year-old glass ceiling to become the first woman president of Harvard, where you have become a champion of socioeconomic equity in higher education.

For your sterling integrity as a historian and an agent of academic reinvention, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Drew Gilpin Faust, the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, honoris causa.

Lila R. Gediman
Your stellar academic career proves Katharine Hepburn right: "If you obey all of the rules, you miss all of the fun." By rewriting the rules for studying language, you made seminal contributions to linguistics. When your research transcended your field, you teamed with your husband, eminent psychologist Henry L. Roisman, to joyfully integrate linguistics with psychology. Your career did not unfold "by the book." You worked briefly in publishing after earning a B.A. in Literature from Antioch College. You took graduate classes in Classics at Penn, where your passion for translating Greek caused your professor, Henry Hoensgen, to steer you toward Penn's linguistics department. There you thrived among other talented protégés of Zellig Harris, among them Noam Chomsky.

After completing your PhD in linguistics in 1967, you became associate professor of linguistics at Swarthmore. You joined Penn's psychology department as professor in 1970; you currently are Professor Emerita and visiting professor at Rutgers University.

As a young mother you broke new ground with your observations of "Motherese," the sing-song speech mothers use to teach language to their babies. Further work with...
deaf and blind children led to your bold hypothesis that children can “bootstrap” their way into learning language using their surprisingly sophisticated knowledge of grammar to learn the meaning of unfamiliar words.

Your first joint paper with your husband in 1970 launched a lifelong professional partnership. Graduate students relished the weekly graduate seminar you co-led both for its richness of debate and the French cheese you served. An array of collaborative projects sprouted from this fertile soil.

In 1990 you co-founded Penn’s interdisciplinary Institute for Research in Cognitive Science, which you co-directed until 2000. A former president of the Linguistic Society of America, you have been recognized with many prestigious awards and fellowships.

For your pioneering discoveries at the nexus of language and thought and for inspiring young scientists from all ages to the edge of the unknown while engaging television appearances that sparked frequent comparisons to your mentor, the late Carl Sagan, and earned you NASA’s Frederick P. Rose Directorship. Upon graduating from the Bronx High School of Science, you earned a B.A. in physics from Harvard and a Ph.D in astrophysics from Columbia. Your next stop was Princeton, for postdoctoral research in astrophysics. Joining the American Museum of Natural History’s Hayden Planetarium in 1993, you rose in three years from research associate to assume the planetarium’s first Frederick P. Rose Directorship.

Your research on star formation, dwarf galaxies, and the structure of our Milky Way led to your appointment to Presidential and NASA advisory commissions. Your scientific principles propelled you to challenge Pluto’s planetary status and to question the theory of intelligent design. Yet it is your gift for “bringing the universe down to earth” through monthly essays in Natural History magazine, nine best-selling books, and engaging television appearances that sparks frequent comparisons to your mentor, the late Carl Sagan, and earned you NASA’s Distinguished Public Service Medal in 2004.

Who would not be drawn to your most recent book, Death by Black Hole – and Other Cosmic Quandaries and its subtitle: Or How the Cosmos Intends to Dismember You Slowly in Itty-Bitty Pieces?

For research in astrophysics that has expanded significantly our knowledge of our universe, for piloting inquiring minds of all ages to the edge of the unknown while wearing planetary (astronomical) neckties, and for inspiring young scientists from all backgrounds to follow their dreams, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Cyril Ramaphosa, the degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa.

Neil deGrasse Tyson

As a boy you became star-struck by the night sky in New York’s Hayden Planetarium. As a distinguished astrophysicist, best-selling author and essayist, winning television host, you became a leading figure in South Africa’s national unity government and joined Meyer in mediating peace talks in Northern Ireland.

While you have retreated from the political limelight, you have made the world a stage for innovative business ventures and bold humanitarian endeavors, earning you the distinction from Time Magazine as one of the 100 most influential people in the world. In 1997, you launched the Shanduka Group, an investment firm to promote black economic empowerment. And as Vice Chairman of the Global Business Coalition, you are leading the fight against HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria.

For courageously opposing apartheid and then skillfully helping to build a new, truly democratic South Africa, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Cyril Ramaphosa, the degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa.
As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The appearance of a name in this program should not be construed as an indication that the person has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania. Conversely, the absence of a student’s name herein does not necessarily mean that the person has not been awarded a Penn degree. The student’s transcript is the official record of the University.

Note:
As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The appearance of a name in this program should not be construed as an indication that the person has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania. Conversely, the absence of a student's name herein does not necessarily mean that the person has not been awarded a Penn degree. The student's transcript is the official record of the University.
Note: As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The student’s transcript is the official record of the University.

Candidates for the degrees of Master of Arts, Master of Science or Doctor of Philosophy can be found under the Graduate Faculties listing.
As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The appearance of a name in this program should not be construed as an indication that the person has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania. Conversely, the absence of a student's name herein does not necessarily mean that the person has not been awarded a Penn degree. The student's transcript is the official record of the University.
Note:
As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The student's transcript is the official record of the University.

As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The appearance of a name in this program should not be construed as an indication that the person has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania. Conversely, the absence of a student's name herein does not necessarily mean that the person has not been awarded a Penn degree. The student's transcript is the official record of the University.

As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The appearance of a name in this program should not be construed as an indication that the person has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania. Conversely, the absence of a student's name herein does not necessarily mean that the person has not been awarded a Penn degree. The student's transcript is the official record of the University.

WE'RE GREEN

This program is printed on Lustro Offset Environmental (LOE) paper. LOE boasts 30% Post Consumer Waste and FSC Chain of Custody. 100% of the electricity used to manufacture LOE at Sappi's Muskegon and Cloquet Mills is Green-e certified renewable energy.

FSC – the global benchmark for responsible forest management. The FSC logo identifies products which contain wood from well – managed forests certified by Bureau Veritas Certification in accordance with the rules of the Forest Stewardship Council.
THE IVY DAY STONES

Since June 7, 1873, every senior class graduating from the University of Pennsylvania has placed at least one Ivy Day stone somewhere on the university campus. Each stone is unveiled during a ceremony, held a few days prior to Commencement, in which a sprig of ivy is planted. This tradition, called Ivy Day, seems to have started as a way for the graduating class to commemorate its time at the University. Locations of selected Ivy Day stones are noted below.
