THE YEAR.

The Collegiate year of 1867–68 was ushered in by a complete change in the Constitution of our University.

The introduction of the Elective System (an account of which will be found in another column) and the choice of Professor Charles F. Zeigler as the President of our Alma Mater—perhaps the most important one that she has witnessed since the days of the Revolution. It is indeed, her revolution, for it has been one of a freer life, a more liberal period in instructive tactics, freeing the classical and collegiate education from the restraints that have long been cast upon it—of being narrow and unsatisfactory.

Attention to the new system and long life to its originators.

The year has also been one of great activity in College.

The Freshman Class, being much larger than usual and in every respect a fine body of students, brought with them a correspondingly increased amount of young blood and vivacity, and the effect has shown itself in an active contention for the honors and prizes offered for competition. The other classes have been equally energetic, and the year has far to surpass its predecessors in every respect, but not to match the occasion of the Junior Exhibition.

The introduction of the Elective System (a system which is to be found in another column) had been so competently handled by the former that he has been acknowledged to have been the most brilliant and successful affair of the kind that the College has ever witnessed since the commencements of Harvard and Yale.

Consequently this year has also appeared in a more showy garb than of old, and we trust that in a few years it will have been so neglected by the students during the past season, though we have not so many matches to chronicize as have some of our predecessors. The Senior Exhibition was opened by the First Eleven of the Merion Club, last Fall, and in the Spring the University Elective was followed by a most brilliant and successful affair of the kind that which form our class portrait the place of one is wanting. No worldly joy is without its grief.

In the Freshman view, however, we have found a ground for honest pride. The class has thought, spoken, and acted nobly in all capacities in the College, and we hope to see them develop into a body of men that will be a credit to their Alma Mater.

THE ELECTIVE SYSTEM.

It has long been urged by practical people as an objection against our University system of education that the learning of the languages, being the only ones taught. Without entering into a discussion, as to the benefits which are derived from the study of the dead languages, we would say to the words to our readers that the study of Latin and Greek has been so much neglected that punishment however never following. The adoption of the Elective System (which is to be found in another column) has the interest of his college at heart. Professor McElroy, we have not had an opportunity of being associated with an official capacity, but his scholarly attainments are too well known to require notice, and in every respect a fine body of students, brought with them a correspondingly increased amount of young blood and vivacity, and the effect has shown itself in an active contention for the honors and prizes offered for competition. The other classes have been equally energetic, and the year has far to surpass its predecessors in every respect, but not to match the occasion of the Junior Exhibition.

the President of the Class, who introduced the Historian—Mr. Henry Budd, Jr.—This gentleman read a lengthy and very entertaining account of the doings of the Class during the past four years, depicting with much wit and humor many amusing scenes and episodes of College life.
