The college year bows itself gracefully behind the curtain with privilège tutiel, &c. Of the Senior Class the record is not complete, and we are told for consolation that the happiest part of our life is gone. We first beg leave to say that the Life Guard of the Juniors met with great feeling, after their cars had been carefully measured, that they could not go on without a re-examination. Oh, dear friends, your affection for even the college forms, (posterior in the bosom) the heart, but the bliss of a life of prolonged examinations is not vouchsafed to sinful mortals. You meet now the waves, thores, rough roads, battle, humблиblesses, (these are all the standard metaphors, we believe) of life: be strong, be brave, knock about—progress.

We are sorry to see in the Freshman Class a rivalry of sections takes the place of class spirit. Two separate organizations of nearly equal strength were formed, and the work of the day was disposed of in principle and destructive in practice. While it destroys the spirit of the corps and the class ties which make up her value, we believe it renders a class powerless in its relations to other classes and in its undertakings. The figures 73 which at least should be one bond of union mean nothing here—two organizations, two motes, two badges, two colors, two uniforms, two flags. It is true there are two sections. We hope that this will never happen again and that '74 will expend all its spleen on the other classes and its undivided strength on class undertakings if not upon the classics. In a spirit of prophecy we recommend a charter union with the Class of 73.

Mr. G. K. Hunter, who, as “Fritz the Masher,” had already figured largely in the History and the Poem, was selected by the Class to receive this honor. The Class, in remembrance of numerous disabilities of this gentleman’s, which had certainly marked his career, had carefully measured and determined to give him a sabre, and had deputed Mr. T. L. Harrison to present it. Mr. Harrison, with a proud face, and as if the occasion had presented a huge seimic to Mr. Hunter, brandishing it before his face, and displaying its size with such flourish, raised the broad tin scimitar, three feet long. Mr. Hunter expressed his thanks for the sabre, and the gentleman’s astonishment. Indeed, everyone was satisfied that if Fritz had been in the grove for over an hour, he would have carried the broadest scimitar in the world. The Class concluded the exercises, by passing the Wooden Spoon being even greater than the Classics. In a spirit of prophecy we recommend a change of name to the Class of 72, who are bound to abstain from wine.

The contest for elocution prizes took place on the second day. The figures 73 which at least should be one bond of union mean nothing here—two organizations, two motes, two badges, two colors, two uniforms, two flags. It is true there are two sections. We hope that this will never happen again and that ‘74 will expend all its spleen on the other classes and its undivided strength on class undertakings if not upon the classics. In a spirit of prophecy we recommend a charter union with the Class of 73.

The Class then concluded the exercises, by presenting the Poem, enlarging on the course of nature and College-life. The Poet, Mr. H. G. Ward, followed with the Poem, enlarging on the course of nature and College-life. The Poet, Mr. H. G. Ward, followed with the Poem, enlarging on the course of nature and College-life. Keim. Mr. Keim's oration on John Brown, entitled of '71 celebrated their Junior Exhibition in Musical reasons for their salvation, but making faith the original manner. A Hero, was masterly and eloquent. The Exhibition. He then introduced Mr. Newton the orchestra, Mr. Charles Carver, the President of their seats upon the stage. After an overture by exercises were concluded by the singing of a Class gaver an amusing and witty description of the scene.

Aft the heaving earth. Nobly they replant the giddy discorse Bravely they surmount the reelings of deep, arms herself against the doomed objects of this plausible, by a few Schnapps of truth. But our text, 40 ducks in gutter. They were there. not May 14th, the Junior Class were, in the words of the heaving earth.
